

When I returned home after triple bypass surgery in early June, I was incredibly lucky that Human Touch Home Care sent me Connie. She is truly a wonder. She grew up on her parents' farm in North Carolina and the work ethic she acquired there is absolutely extraordinary. Her primary focus, of course, has been to help me recuperate, and I'm certain that without her attentive help I would not have regained nearly as much strength as I have. She always makes sure that I observe all the precautions in my daily life that insure I will avoid injury. For several years she ran a successful catering business. She quickly learned what foods I like and cooks me delicious meals. Since my surgeon is reluctant for me to drive, Connie drives me everywhere. She plugs in her GPS device to my car and we make it to every appointment on time, even though some are in unfamiliar territory quite far away. I find it very helpful that she shops for me and is computer savvy. The other day when my printer jammed, it took her no more than a few minutes to fix it. She enjoys taking on difficult projects. For example, she recently took down all the curtains in my three story house, washed and ironed them, and then re-hung them. In August, she volunteered to cut back the severely overgrown Rose of Sharon hedge that had been running wild for several years, and that is only one of several demanding tasks she has taken on.

What I appreciate most about Connie, is her concern for others, her social skills, and her integrity. She really cares about her clients. She is never obtrusive, but she is a very pleasant, helpful, companion who possesses an appealing sense of humor. She worked her way through two years of Community College and can hold up her end of any conversation. Her integrity and honesty are beyond question. She has a key to my house and knows the code of the alarm system. I haven't the slightest doubt she will never abuse them. Over the course of my late wife's extensive illness, HTHC provided us with a number of Home Health Aides. Many of them were excellent but none were nearly as helpful as Connie. She richly deserves a Home Health Aid award.
